Princeton Tec is also hoping to take a sizable bite out of the ultra-light market with the release of the Byte. Weighing in at a feathery 64 grams, the Byte still packs a bright punch thanks to the Maxbright LED that burns for 80 hours on high beam and up to 146 hours when using softer, more romantic settings. The large push button is perfect for hands fumbling in the dark and a red light mode protects hard-won night vision. The Spot retails for $89.95, see seatosummit.com.au; while the Byte retails for $39.95, outdooragencies.com.au
