30 YEARS, 30 PARKS

A photograph of a person standing on a large, moss-covered rock in a forest stream. The person is wearing a hat, a long-sleeved shirt, shorts, and a backpack. They are looking up and touching the rock. The stream flows over the rocks, and the surrounding forest is lush with green foliage and ferns.

KINESIS TECH GTX

The SCARPA Kinesis Tech GTX is set to meet the needs of hikers in the most demanding terrain. The tough Nubuck upper is bolstered with a protective rubber rand delivering legendary Scarpa durability while the Gore-Tex lining provides the protection and comfort it is famous for. The new ACTIVfit Technology, which is a product of Scarpa's years of experience and research, incorporates a variety of ergonomic features that deliver a modern boot with superior performance, comfort and durability!

SCARPA® BIOMETRIC SOLE
The new Vibram® Biometric sole unit is anatomically designed, delivers superior stability and maximum grip.

SCARPA STRATOS $250

This Italian master-cobbler's Scarpa SL is arguably the boot all others are judged by, so it's little wonder that the Stratos is an equally fitting offering. This beautifully crafted, full-suede shoe provides fantastic support, and coupled with a medium Vibram sole (one of the best in the survey), is equally at home on good tracks or the rough stuff. Stiffer than most of the surveyed shoes (bar the Càrn and Zamberlan), the Stratos really shines once off the manicured tracks, but it also looks so good you could wear it to work (I know I would). The toe and heel are reinforced, the lace eyelets strong, the removable footbed well padded, and there's a 3/4 length tongue gusset to keep out the water. The Gore-Tex inner is probably overkill, as this shoe will survive a serious dunking. At 498 grams, it's the heaviest of the pure shoes, and $250 buys you a choice of black or tan.
